Appendix 1: Frequently Asked Questions

◎ Application

Q1: I am in my last semester of bachelor's/master's degree. Am I eligible to apply for the master's degree for the following semester?

Applicants who are in their last semester of bachelor's or master's degree are eligible of applying for the enrollment of the following semester under the condition that their bachelor's/master's degree will be awarded before they enroll at POSTECH.

Q2: How do I pay the application fee online?

Applicants must pay the application fee via credit card. However, if applicants have problems with making their payment online via credit card, follow the following instructions:

- 1) Install payment system program (Active X).
- 2) POSTECH's payment system (LG U+) adopts 3D-Secure authentication via VISA or MASTER. If you have a card that does not obtain 3D-Secure authentication, payment is not possible. Therefore, applicants should apply the 3D-Secure authentication to their card firm in order to be able to make the payments.

Q3: What if I want to revise my online application?

Applicants are able to save and revise their online application until the application deadline, even if they finalized the application and payed the application fee. After the deadline is over, it is no longer possible for applicants to edit their application.

Q4: I am currently a prospective graduate. When do I have to submit my degree certificate?

Applicants who are not able to submit their degree certificate/certificate of graduation at the stage of their online application because they are prospective graduates are required to submit the provisional letter/certificate of graduation including the institute's official seal to Admissions Office first, and afterwards submit the original copy of the degree certificate before the date of admission.

◎ Language Proficiency

Q1: What if I do not meet the required score for English proficiency?

Since POSTECH's language of instruction is mainly English, prospective students must reach an average level of English proficiency. Therefore, all applicants are required to prove their English proficiency through an official test or either a document that proves the instruction language of applicants' institution. Refer to the contents of "Eligibility" previously.

Q2: Can other English Proficiency Tests (e.g. GRE) substitute the English Proficiency Tests listed previously?

No other English Proficiency Tests can substitute the English Proficiency Tests listed previously. You have to acquire the minimum score of at least one of the previously indicated tests. However, if you do possess other English Proficiency Score or certificates, you can submit them along with the compulsory requirements.

Q3: How can I get a document for "Proof of Instruction Language"?

Applicants whose institution performs all of the lectures in English are qualified to substitute the English Proficiency Test with a document that verifies the institution's instruction language. If the applicant's institution does not have such an official document, he/she can submit other documents (e.g. transcript, enrollment certificate, etc.) with the institution's original seal and the following phrase: "It is hereby verified that the instruction language of (institution's name) is English."
